Programs Approved with Conditional or Probationary Accreditation Status

Loyola University – Chicago
Chicago, IL
Bachelor of Science in Forensic Science
Probationary Accreditation for a term not to exceed one (1) full year – February 2023
Standard 4.2.1c Forensic Science Courses requires a minimum of six additional upper-level science courses with lab. As defined, it is not clear if all courses with labs are required for all students. The FEPAC awarded Probationary Accreditation for a period of one (1) year or until the program provides evidence of meeting the Standard.

Utah Valley University
Orem, UT
Bachelor of Science with Forensic Laboratory Concentration
Conditional Accreditation for a period not to exceed one (1) full year – January 2023
Standard 4.3 Program Director requires the a full-time faculty member appropriately qualified to meet the program’s mission. The program director shall have a minimum of a Master’s Degree and at least three (3) years experience as a forensic science practitioner OR and earned doctorate in an appropriate discipline and three (3) years experience as an academic forensic scientist. The program currently does not have a program director meeting these requirements. The interim director does not have the appropriate experience as detailed. The university is actively seeking a program director that meets the FEPAC requirements. The FEPAC awarded conditional accreditation for a period of one (1) year to provide sufficient time for the program to fill this position.
