	Andrea Zaferes, Aquatic Abuse and Homicide – recognition, scene processing, documentation, and investigation Females are the majority victim gender of aquatic homicides. Incidents of nonfatal aquatic abuse of women and children in domestic violence, sex trafficking, sexual assaults, and child maltreatment are commonly missed. Criminalists are rarely trained how to process aquatic scenes that range from buckets, baths, showers, and toilets, to lakes, rivers and oceans. Law enforcement are at an equal disadvantage at identifying and investigating these gender-biased crimes that are more prevalent than currently recognized.
