2017 CSI Summer Camp

For High School Students

The American Academy of Forensic Sciences is pleased to present the 2017 CSI Summer Camp for High School Teens. CSI - Helping bring the classroom to life.

Since the mid-1970's, The American Academy of Forensic Sciences (AAFS) has been hosting one-day Student Academy sessions for middle- and high school students during its Annual Meetings. Student Academy is designed to introduce students to the real world of multidisciplinary forensics and over the years has steadily grown in popularity.

With today's explosion of television programs and media coverage of the latest advancements in the forensic sciences, students have become fascinated with anything relating to the work of the forensic scientist. Wishing to foster a stronger interest in science learning among our nation's young people, the AAFS now co-sponsors the CSI Summer Camp, a weeklong submersion into the field of forensics.

The goal of the conference is to increase students' understanding of the forensic sciences and provide a foundation as they learn about forensics in their classrooms.

A limited number of scholarships are available. To apply for a scholarship, complete the Scholarship Application Form and return with your registration.
